

DEMOCRATS RATIFY

Their First Campaign Meeting in Phoenix.

Chilly Weather and a Still Cooler Meeting.

Tom. Farish Speaks Upon the Tariff
Frank Cox Boasts of Acquaintance with Spirits.

The Democracy of Phoenix held services last night at the Military Plaza. The Pioneer Band furnished the brass music and Meers, Farish, Chalmers, Webb, Cox and Zulick played the wind instruments. The music by the Pioneer Band was excellent indeed.

At about 8 o'clock Mr. E. Irvine, called the audience to order and announced that trouble was about to begin and very properly instituted proceedings to that end by the introduction of Mr. T. E. Farish, who can probably talk longer and say less than any other man in the Territory. Mr. Farish talked what he was pleased to call Democratic principles and platform; told his auditors everything that he knew and a great deal that he didn't know about the tariff and McKinley bill and when he had finished this branch of his discussion stopped to wait for applause and take a drink of water, but the water was all he got. He started in again but the Chairman earned the everlasting friendship of every one in the audience by choking him off and calling for music by the band.

The next speaker was L. H. Chalmers, who is anxious to warm a seat in the next Legislature. He paid a glowing tribute to his auditors on the Democratic ticket, and didn't fail to impress his hearers with the fact that he thought he was about as good as any of them. Mr. Chalmers' remarks had the virtue of brevity, and at that account received attention.

Samuel F. Webb followed in a few well-worded remarks setting forth as reasons why he should be elected Sheriff of Maricopa county that he had held office before and had made a clean record; was an old citizen and if elected would try to do his duty.

A perceptible shiver ran through the crowd as the form of Frank "Eternity" Cox advanced to the railing with evident signs of a verbal eruption. Mr. Cox started in under a full head of steam, saying all the nice things he could think of about the Democratic nominees, especially Mark Sulick, and then he paid his compliments to their Republican opponents. Referring to the candidacy of one Republican Mr. Cox said, that while he was too fresh, he admired him very much, because he could take a drink of whiskey as easy as he (Cox) could. One audience member was heard to remark audibly to his neighbor that the Republican nominee should be a little more handy about it. Mr. Cox proceeded to make his usual stump talk and when he had said everything he could think of, he took a glass of water and sat down. At the hour of the press he was reported out of danger.

As the beautiful strains of music died away and in remarkable but marked contrast the voice of C. Meyer Zulick was heard penetrating the night air as he addressed the now decreasing audience and attempted to give them the impression that New Jersey was a much better State to hail from than Mississippi. He said he hoped none of his Democratic friends would be sorry for the attacks made upon him by the Republican press, as he was simply able to take care of himself and intended in this campaign to be on the aggressive and not defensive. He failed to refer, however, to the fact that the challenge to joint discussion had originated with the Republican Central Committee, as an evidence of his aggressiveness. Mr. Zulick spoke but a few moments, evidently preferring not to uncoil himself any earlier in the campaign than was absolutely necessary.

All of the speakers took especial pains to assure the voters that the chief claim of leader Zulick to their suffrages was that he did not vote the Capital bill in deference to the wishes of the Prescott people. Phoenixians have heard this so much and know so well that Mr. Zulick did simply what his interest to do, without any particular love for Phoenix, that these multiplied allusions had rather a comical effect.

Take it all in all it was a pretty dry campaign meeting, especially to "Eternity" Cox, but the glare of the electric light, the melody of the music and the smiling faces of the ladies took the sharp edges off and the Republican reporter managed to stand it until the wind up.

NOT APPROVED.

GENERAL MORGAN DOES NOT LIKE McDOWELL.

Believes That the Indian School Should Be Located Near Phoenix, Amid Civilizing Influences.

Hon. J. T. Morgan, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, returned yesterday from an investigating trip to Fort McDowell, and in an interview with a Republican reporter, stated that he had arrived at the conclusive opinion that the establishment of an Indian school at that point would be most impracticable.

The General recited as reasons, and which he had already embodied in a report to the Secretary of the Interior, that the location was thirty-five miles from railroad connection, this entailing a considerable expense for freight by wagon.

The buildings too are in a dilapidated condition and the appropriation made would not begin to make the repairs and improvements necessary. "This place is, furthermore, withdrawn from any of the influences of civilization and I have always contended," said General Morgan, "that to reach those results aimed at by these schools, the Indian pupils must be brought into contact with the civilizing influences of association. In other words, to bring civilization to the Indian or the Indian to civilization. There is every reason to believe that with your fertile lands and that already secured factor of fertility, your irrigation system, that there will be abundant field for the exercise of the training we wish to give the Indian pupil near your city. It is for the people of Phoenix to consider this matter and to give their assistance as far as practicable."

A further point made by Commissioner Morgan against the location of the school at Fort McDowell is that the weather statistics show that it is one of the hottest points on the continent, even surpassing Yuma in that respect. General Morgan is favorably impressed with the evidences of thrift and the prospects of this valley, as seen by him in his riding about.

He still addresses the people tonight at the Opera House upon the question of Indian education and will doubtless state many interesting facts.

RAIDED A SALOON.

Deadly Affray Precipitated by Some Amateur Vigilantes.

CALISTOGA, Cal., October 11.—Near the Bradford gulch silver mine, in Lake county, last evening, several masked men raided a saloon kept by Stephen Rich and wife, the result being one of the worst tragedies reported for this part of the State for a long time.

As soon as the raiders entered the place shooting began, right and left, and Mrs. Rich was fatally wounded, being shot three or four times. Rich was also wounded and W. R. McGuire was shot dead during the fight. Mrs. Rich pulled the mask off one man and she recognized him as Henry Arcaro, an employe at the mine. McGuire also worked there. Fred Bennett, a hanger-on at the saloon, escaped through a window. Tar and feathers, supposed to have been intended for him, were afterwards found near by.

The raid was no doubt to permanently clear the saloon of the persons occupying it, particularly Bennett. Whether the murder was at first intended or not, none but the raiders can tell. The inquest is being held. No wrong have yet been made, though parties are being shadowed awaiting the result of the inquest.

PUNISHED UNDER A TRAIN.

Awful Crime Perpetrated While Trying to Escape a Prisoner.

AKRON, Ohio, October 11.—There was a terrible tragedy at Orville last night. George Boydston had arrested John Gueezey and had him in custody on the depot platform.

Just as an engine was coming along a "C" of Gueezey's stepped up from behind and pushed Boydston in front of it. The Coroner was terribly mangled and must have died instantly. He retained his grip on Gueezey, however, as he went down, and the prisoner was fatally injured. The man who pushed him down was caught and placed in jail.

Cyclone in Pima County.

From the Tucson News.
Mr. Samuel Righetti came in from his ranch yesterday. He stated to a representative of the Star that last Saturday afternoon a cyclone came down the valley west of the Tucson mountains. It was not more than a quarter of a mile wide, but was terrific in power. The cloud moved down the valley, following a zig zag course. The roar of the storm, at a distance of more than five miles, sounded like a mighty waterfall. Hail stones fell as large as chickens' eggs and penetrated the ground so that when they melted there was a small puddle of water left where they fell. Along the course of the cyclone the grass was cut off as with a scythe. Trees and shrubs were all uprooted.

The cyclone struck across from the Silver Bell mountains to the Owl Head district, but it had lost some of its force before reaching there, but the hail which fell was very large.
